

This might seem a wee bit unnecessary but this useful bit of nature is not obvious and starts at the large vehicular and pedestrian access gates on The Street.

If you enter from The Street, bear right immediately you pass through the pedestrian gateway and down the slope. Then immediately keep left and follow the path down through the rough and tumble. Plenty of untidy vegetation and drystone walling to house small creatures.

That path turns right through a sort-of gateway and becomes a short trek along a footpath with ruined walls on the left. This then becomes home in season to the Chimney Sweeper Moth (if you can catch them with a lens).

After exploring follow the path back to civilisation as shown.
