

Thereabouts images – Lamaload Route 02 (anti-clockwise)

Images are arranged in route order, whether or not the images were shot on the same day. An arrow on any image indicates the shooting direction for the image concerned, when not in the direction of travel. That could be facing backwards down the trail or any other direction. This helps resolve the issue of shooting into the sun. The main purpose of this document is to capture an impression of route characteristics, so people can make choices based on the information. It is not intended to be an independent illustrated route guide or a portfolio of landscape images.

The character of this area has changed significantly recently with the felling of large swathes of Larch trees (diseased). At the same time views of the concrete buttress dam are now available that were not before. Nature will soon obliterate evidence: April 22

Small wet area frequented by Damselflies in season. From June onwards: April 22

The road created to give access to forestry vehicles. Bare ground will soon started to recover: April 22

Dropping down to the waterworks: April 22

A view of the concrete buttress dam: April 22

Pursued by a flock of sheep along the public footpath: April 22

Back to Hooleyhey Lane: April 22

The reservoir from Hooleyhey Lane: April 22

Back to the start and the old barn: April 22

Revised: 22.04.2022